Bio

"THE STREAMLINERS".....don't sound like anyone else ...they're not blues, not soul, not roots, not jazz, not funk... yet they are all these things and they just sound like the streamliners...they really have a sound of their own... they're truly a unique band!' ('Blues Power' 3D Radio FM - July 2011).....

With a band consisting of some of the cream of South Australian roots/rock musicians, "The Streamliners" are an Australian institution of blues, soul and roots music. Having won countless awards as a band, individual artists and for their recordings including "Best Roots & Blues Album 2011" for their 5th recording "Signs", and having backed up many international artists including Buddy Guy, Junior Wells and Charlie Musselwhite to name a few over their 20-year existence.

Priding themselves on song writing and live performance, their music conjures images of vast rural landscapes and the urban fabric of social life. With influences and comparisons made to such artists as Van Morrison, Allman Brothers, Los Lobos, Bob Dylan and John Lee Hooker, it is a band full of colour, texture and variety when they hit the stage or on record.

With 2 of the most sought after guitarists in Adelaide, Nick Kipridis and Bill "Billy Bob" Rankine, together with a backup of bass, keyboards and percussion, there is a unique synergy at play when these five musicians get together. Their unpredictable live shows take on a spin of their own that to the audience's delight, sound fresher and somewhat beyond the 5 CD's released over the last few years. The Streamliners are a group continually striving to take that extra step into the void of musical improvisation while pushing the envelope of "Roots Music".

Currently in the studio recording their latest 6th release to come out in 2012, The Streamliners have lots of musical mileage to inspire longtime fans and newcomers alike with their eclectic and elusive brew of bluesy, folk/rock experimental music.
